Features

- 8 HANDS-ON HUB
Linfield's new Center for the Northwest was a catalyst for research this summer – from pavement ants and diverse learners to the Oregon Wine History Project.
- 14 SOUND MIND, SOUND BODY
Jesús llundáin-Agurruza uses examples from everyday life to explain complex philosophical ideas to his students. He adheres to the Greek ideal of “sound mind, sound body” and gets some of his best ideas while riding his bicycle.
- 16 THE BEST IN THE NATION!
Cathy Carnahan '73 was named national middle school principal of the year for her dedication and vision as Duniway Middle School principal.
- 18 A YOUTH VOICE AT INTERNATIONAL SUMMIT
Melissa Greenaway '12 had an unprecedented glimpse of politics on a global scale as one of seven college students representing the United States at the My Summit conference, during the G8 and G20 summits.

INSIDE LINFIELD MAGAZINE

If you have an aversion to bugs, spend a few hours with Chad Tillberg and his students in Insect Biology and you might be pulled into the complex world of the tiny critters under our feet. That is one example in this issue of last summer's collaborative research funded through the new Center for the Northwest. We also introduce you to one of our philosophy professors known for his energy and animation. We salute an alumna who was named national middle school principal of the year and take a look at an alumnus who tracks down cyber criminals. You'll learn about a student who had an inside look at global politics during the G8 and G20 summits in Canada. And you will get a glimpse of the transformation under way at Northup Hall. Read on for these and the many stories that attest to the power of a small college.
