Inside Linfield Magazine

"Green" has become the new catchword. But for many individuals, businesses and organizations, it is more than just a passing fad. In this issue, meet a student leader whose passion, lifestyle and future career take "green" to a new level. You will also learn about steps Linfield has taken to reduce its carbon footprint through classroom projects and long-range planning. You'll read how a student's internship thrust him into the world of animation and the production of a major film. We introduce you to Dean Victoria McGillin and learn some of her views after her first 11 months at Linfield. You'll get a look at some stunning views of Mount Kilimanjaro as we follow two alumni on a research expedition. And we say farewell to professors who are retiring after serving the college for many years. While this has been a challenging year for many in our community, we look ahead to continuing Linfield's rich tradition of academic excellence. Join us.
