TRUSTEES HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

MUCH INTEREST IS SHOWN

Important Change is Made In Music Course

The regular semi-annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of McMinnville College was held January 7th, in the college building. The meeting was well attended and the interest shown was very encouraging. In fact this was the best-attended meeting of the board in the last five years. Those present were Messrs. C. Tilbury, Hon. B. F. Rhodes, Geo. Finley, J. B. Dodson, N. C. Christenson, Rev. W. P. Elmore, Walter T. Jenks, Walter P. Dyke, James S. Failing, W. L. Morgan, Hon. O. P. Coshov, Jr., Rev. J. L. Whirry, A. C. Chandler, and L. E. Latourette.

For the noon meal the trustees were guests of the College Club.

The following changes in Music and Commercial courses were adopted:

The following was recommended by the faculty and adopted by the Trustees: First, that hereafter the course now called the Music-Philosophical course, leading to the degree of Bach. of Phil., should lead to the degree of B. of Mus. with the understanding that those now in the classes of 1914, '15, '16 and '17, taking this course, may have their choice of either of these degrees. Second, that a diploma be granted to those having college entrance requirements who complete the regular course in music and take one year of modern languages and one year of English and Bible, or Pedagogy. Third, that a certificate be granted all others who complete the regular course in piano and voice.

The Faculty also recommended that the degree B. of Mus. on the present basis, be granted only to present seniors who graduate in 1914 and present juniors who graduate in 1915. This recommendation of the Faculty followed a special investigation made by Prof. Boughton concerning the practice of other institutions. This revealed the fact that only one other institution, Pacific College, at Newberg, granted this degree on so low a basis as has been our custom. Only four institutions, Oberlin, U. of W., U. of Ore. and U. of Puget Sound, grant the degree of Bach. of Mus. at all, and these with about such requirements as are indicated in the recommendations stated here. This action places McMinnville on a par with the standard of our best institutions.

The Faculty also recommended that our present Commercial Department be combined with the Preparatory Department, and that our college entrance requirements be made to include three-year units, or 45 credits of vocational work. This action taken will not eliminate any work now done by our commercial department, but will hereafter require that such students be classified in our catalogue as Preparatory students, which arrangement is similar to that now adopted by the best of our high schools. These actions will involve no change whatever in the tuition rate at present charged.

Winter Term Begins

The Winter Term was formally commenced at nine o'clock on Jan. 5th, when registration began in the college chapel. The total registration on the first day was 208, the largest number ever registered in one day in the history of the institution. The complete registration for the fall term was 247. Thirteen new students began work this term, which makes the total registration for the year 260.

Seniors Entertained

On Wednesday evening, Jan. 7, the Senior class was gloriously entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Day on South B street. At 7 o'clock the eight Seniors sat down to a sumptuous five-course dinner, consisting of oyster soup, banana salad, a roasted whole pig, and too many other good things to mention. The guests did not leave the table until after 9 o'clock. Discussions worthy of Seniors filled the rest of the evening, interspersed with solos by Mr. Culver.

WRITES ANOTHER LETTER TO HOME-FOLKS

Anonymous Scribe Proceeds to Tell What He Thinks About People and Things

Dear Mother, Dad and Vera—I've just arrived home from a frat meeting and, tho the lights are supposed to be out at ten, will have to take this time to write to you. We brot our landlady a big box of candy and an aluminum teakettle for a Christmas present tho, so I guess it will be all right with her for a while. Will get her something else then. She's pretty good to us.

I came down to Portland Thursday and thought about the party going to come off on Friday night for those who stayed over, so came on to "Mac" Friday evening. We had a fine time at the party, altho a bunch of us fellows didn't have girls to eat supper

BIG HOLIDAY AFFAIR IS GIVEN

Faculty Entertains Student Body on January 2

Friday evening, January 2, in Music Hall, the faculty entertained the members of the student body who were in town. A few dozen of the students remained in McMinnville during the holidays and many returned before the date of this "doings." More than 100 were present.

The first part of the evening was spent in playing some uncommon "ring" games. A great deal of merriment was caused by the game of "Jerusalem."

A gift not to exceed ten cents in value was brought by each student. These were distributed later in the evening. Many and varied selections had been made and when the packages were opened, the appropriateness of some of the gifts was quite amusing. For instance, a young lady received a safety razor.

When partners for refreshments were found, about 15 fellows were, as usual, unlucky. They gathered into a mournful group in the center of the room, where they attempted to attract the attention of the rest of the crowd to their plight.

The refreshments consisted of delicious sandwiches, apples, and hot chocolate. The crowd concluded the evening with a few old songs, and departed voting the faculty to be jolly entertainers.

We were glad to have present many former students from the town and friends of the college.

CHEMAWA GETS 5 BLEEDING SCALPS

FINAL SCORE IS 33 TO 29

Close Game on Hostile Floor Ends in Our Defeat

The basketball game played on Jan. 10th at Salem with the Chemawa Indian Training School was lost to Chemawa with a score of 33-29.

The college team left Saturday morning, January 10th, to play the Indians on Saturday evening. Those making the trip were: Breuning, Irish, Bishop, Culver, Pettit, Captain Tipton, Black, Bean, and Manager Brace.

The game started at 7:15 and from the time the whistle was blown by Referee Grilley of the Portland Y. M. C. A. until the end of the game, the spectators were given an exhibition of real basketball. The Indians' passing far excelled that of our team. But, during the first half, they could not locate the basket to any advantage. The first half ended in a score of 24-12 in favor of McMinnville. We were pretty sure of victory, the whole team doing fine work in that half. Irish and Breuning showed up with some of their last year's speed, while Black played a good game at center. Bean and Tipton deserve great credit for the score in the half, both men playing a game that kept the ball at McMinnville's end of the floor most of the time.

In the second half Pettit was put in as guard in place of Bean. In this half the Indian's showed their fighting spirit and played with speed and gameness seldom seen on the basketball floor. With the score two to one against them, they began the half, and when the score began to go up in their favor, it seemed impossible to stop them. They ran our center and forwards off their feet, and, as the guards worked the ball down the floor, each time the Chemawa men brought it back for a sure basket. In this half the McMinnville team had the same misfortune the Indians had in the first. They could not shoot the baskets.

Slough, at center, who scored most of the points for Chemawa the second half, and Jim, at forward, were the stars of the Indian lineup. Captain Tipton, for McMinnville, lived up to his name of "Old Guard" and time after time, thruout the game, broke up plays which looked like certain baskets.

FIVE OUNCES OF COCAINE

A NEW DETECTIVE STORY

By Luther R. Taylor

(Passed by the pure food and drugs act of June 30th, 1706. Serial No. 1915.)

AN unusually large crowd had gathered in front of the Red Cross Pharmacy when John McFarland, the proprietor, arrived that morning.

"What does this mean?" he demanded when he had reached the prescription counter where Jack Donner, the new clerk, was at work.

"Someone broke into the store last night," answered Donner. He had just finished his first week's work as seller of cough drops and roller of pills. McFarland was very favorably impressed with his new clerk and had already put him to work behind the prescription counter.

"Have you notified the sheriff yet?" excitedly asked the proprietor.

"Not yet," replied Donner. "I have just finished a little tour of the store to find out what was missing. I examined the cash register and the safe and found both undisturbed."

"That is singular," commented McFarland. "Did you miss anything at all? How did he get in?"

"Two boxes of those Elearo cigars and our stock of fountain pens are gone. That's all. He gained an entrance by breaking in thru the rear window of the basement, then into the store by coming up the cellar stairs and pushing the door open. It was open this morning when I came."

"Then I guess we might as well call up the sheriff and let him begin tipping over bottles and playing Conan Doyle's stunts."

The proprietor started toward the phone but before he reached it, the bulky form of Hank Skinner, the sheriff, appeared in the doorway.

"What's up? Been touched?" he demanded.

"Burglary," replied McFarland.

"Well, let's hear all about it."

"Nothing much to tell," said the proprietor. "Only some fellow-mortal paid us a call last night. He came in the back way, satisfied his wants with a few boxes of cigars and some fountain pens, and departed without leaving his card."

The right arm of the law went over the store with great care. "Two boxes of cigars! A pocket full of fountain pens! A strange case! A strange case!" he muttered. Then suddenly, Any whiskey gone, John?"

"No," answered the druggist who had just looked over the stock. "But the alcohol bottle is just empty and I am sure I filled it last night."

"A queer case!" pronounced the sheriff again. "Absolutely no clues whatever! I don't understand it. The only thing for me to do is to go out and run in every suspicious-looking person in the neighborhood. Seen any around?"

The sheriff left the store chewing the end of a black cigar.

After he had gone, Donner went down into the basement to search for some possible clue that had been overlooked. By climbing up on a box that the visitor himself had used, he was able to see out thru the broken window. He was about to jump down when the imprint of a hand on the dust-covered window sill caught his attention. On examining it more closely he noticed that the middle finger of the right hand was missing from the second joint. Finding nothing else that showed traces of the thief, he went up stairs again.

"Here, Jack," said the proprietor as the clerk came up. "Here are a couple of prescriptions. I have to go up to Parker's. I'll be back in half an hour."

About five minutes later Jack heard the door open, and, squinting thru the peep-hole, he saw a girl of about nineteen enter. She was dressed in a blue street suit, and her black hair, coiled in braids around her head, made a setting for the oval of her face. She was very pretty.

"I don't see why the boss didn't let me stay out in front a day longer," Jack said to himself, as he shifted his position to get a better view of the girl coming down the aisle.

"She sure is——"

Then his heart began to beat faster. The girl was coming behind the counter and back where he was!

"Hello," she cried, as she pushed aside the curtains. "Oh, I thought it was Daddy! I suppose you are Mr. Donner, the new man?"

"Yes, I'm the new clerk and that is my name—Jack Donner. I am glad to know you," he said, and tried to make a graceful little bow.

So this was Dolly! Jack had heard of her often and he had wondered what kind of a girl she was. No wonder the boss is dippy over her. Such hair and such eyes! Jack thought he had never seen a more attractive girl.

"Is Daddy here," she asked, and smiled.

Jack tipped over a bottle of pills. "No, he stepped out a few minutes ago and said he would be back in half an hour. Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Nothing. But I guess I can help you pick up those pills. Careless.

"If he were here," said Jack, "he would probably set me to washing bottles—and I had rather pick up pills."

When the pills had been gathered up, Dolly turned to go and said, "When Daddy comes tell him to come home an hour early this evening. Will you please?"

Jack watched thru the peephole till she was out on the street again, then turned to his work. A prescription called for ten grains of cocaine. He opened the poison case and reached for the bottle.—It was gone!

"That's strange," thought Jack. "It seems to me we just received five ounces a day or two ago."

When the proprietor returned, Donner told him of the missing cocaine. McFarland sent him to Cannady's to borrow a little of the drug. As he was leaving the store, the sheriff walked in.

"Well, I've got your man," he exclaimed as he reached for the cigar box. When the weed was burning strongly, he continued, "He was an easy one this time. I learned from 'Old Mike' that a fellow had been hanging around there yesterday. So I got the description and went after the man. I found him at 'Billy's Place.' He had been passing around the cigars rather freely and tried to explain to me that that was on account of a recent arrival at the house. But that stuff don't go with me. I've got him down in the lock up. I——"

The sheriff let his cigar fall from his mouth!

Down the aisle marched a man with his hands over his head and behind him was the young drug clerk, with a revolver in his hand and a stern look on his face.

"Here sheriff," he said. "This is your man.—Stand there! Turn around!—I caught him down at Cannady's"

"What!" exclaimed the sheriff. "Better handcuff that man, Hank," said McFarland.

The surprised officer did as he was told and Donner continued.

DELEGATES RETURN FROM KANSAS CITY

Feel Inspiration

George Pollard returned Saturday and E. E. Johnson, Monday, from the Seventh International Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement which was held in Kansas City, Missouri, Dec. 31st to Jan. 4th. Mr. Pollard and Mr. Johnson attended as delegates of this college. They report a very helpful and inspiring time and are overflowing with the spirit and enthusiasm of the great convention. Frank P. Manley, '12, attended the convention as a delegate of Newton Theological Seminary.

There were in attendance over 5000 representative delegates of students and professors from 791 important institutions of higher learning in Canada and the United States, and many leaders of foreign missionary enterprise. Speakers from all over the world, including such men as John R. Mott, who was president of the convention, and Dr. Zwemer, author of "Islam—The Challenge to Faith," who is one of the world's greatest missionaries. Speakers came from England and Scotland to the convention and there were also present, as speakers, returned missionaries from South America, Philippine Islands, China, India, and Africa.

The convention was a great occasion of helpful association and conference. The problems of the evangelization of the non-Christian world were considered, and an inspiration and vision was gained of the foreign missionary responsibilities of America.

Flunk!

Many rumors were circulated before registration day in regard to the great number of students who had flunked in the preceding term. It was said that a dozen or more would be unable to register and many a name was placed on this imaginary black-list. When registration day came around, however, nearly every old student was in his place and Rumor faded away.

Dr. Hinson Appreciated

The monthly visits of Dr. W. B. Hinson of Portland's White Temple are appreciated by the student body. Dr. Hinson has come to McMinnville at regular intervals for the last four years, giving many addresses before the Christian Association and lecturing on homiletics.

On the occasion of his last visit Dr. Hinson stated that it might be necessary for him to discontinue these visits on account of his heavy duties at home. A letter of thanks and appreciation for his past services was immediately written and sent to Dr. Hinson. This letter was signed by practically every student and professor in the institution, and is evidence of the high esteem in which the doctor is held here. It is hoped that this letter may lead Dr. Hinson to continue his occasional visits to McMinnville College.

Later

Dr. Hinson has consented to continue his regular visits for the remainder of the year, and delivered another of his splendid addresses in chapel Tuesday. As evidence of their appreciation of his coming, the whole student body rose to its feet when Dr. Hinson was introduced.

McMinnville-Newberg Game

Jason of old sallied forth in quest of the Golden Fleece—in other words a goat's skin. So sallied forth our dauntless knights of basketball in quest of Newberg's goat last New Year's Eve—but while Jason sought only the fleece, our knights sought the whole goat—and what is more they got it. It was a hard-fought game and good teams were on opposing ground. While the McMinnville team was largely made up of college men, it was just a game of town against town and not an inter-collegiate. The final score was 29-33, needless, of course, to say, in favor of McMinnville.

The line-up was: "Nig" Corpron, Bill Foster, forwards; Sam Simpson center; Harry Bean, Pettit, and Tipton, guards. Ben Larson refereed the game.

A Business Proposition

The importance of our college has been shown this week by the visit of the representatives of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads. They do not find it worth while to visit any other Oregon institution on account of the small number of students drawn from outside. McMinnville College has 48 per cent from outside the state, while Reed college of Portland draws only 2 per cent from abroad. The increased attendance at the college means not only more money for the railroads, but at least $25,000 more than heretofore for the local merchants.

—Telephone-Register.

We Wonder

The students from one of the state institutions who used green paint on the college bridge one night during the holidays, displayed their ignorance of college customs and college honor. We do not object to the few additional signs on the bridge. But the smearing of the sorority emblem revealed meanness and littleness of spirit that is new to us of the small college.

Never become discouraged. If the idea has sound life in it it will strike root and grow. It is like your winter-wheat crop: Day after day the ground is absolutely bare—not an encouraging spear of green anywhere; then, overnight, it is covered with wheat.

—Sat. E. Post.

Team Work

Team work symbolizes the difference between chaos and orderliness, between bull-headed selfishness and helpful cooperation. Team work unifies, systematizes and makes efficient the means of completing the task before us.

Men are by nature selfish. Sometimes thro their own individual interest they ultimately help the community in which their field of activity lies. More often selfishness leads to narrowness, impoliteness, and mental short-sightedness. The man who comes to school for what he can get for his own, only, is the man who will never be popular, who will always be subordinate to more generous hearted men and who will be measured by his friends with the yardstick of his own horizon. On the other hand, the man who comes to McMinnville or any other college and is willing to give and give abundantly is the man who will go out with not only his degree but a deep, true understanding of social bonds and men's hearts which is a prerequisite to all human triumphs.

If when in school and out of school our dealings, our loves, our very lines in all departments,—are to be with men, why not study MEN? Why not seek the cause of our disdain of some, our awe of others, our fear of this one and our burning love for another? Why not think thro to the end our reasons for forming a snap judgment of fellow students, professors or other people, when first we meet them.

Very often we shall find that the cause of being affected unpleasantly by a certain man or lady is our own disability to adjust our life to his needs and a latent fear that this new one who has entered our circle of acquaintanceship will detract from our own possessions, whether material or reputational. We form most of our opinions of others by comparison with those we have known; appreciation tends largely to bias in unwonted degree our judgment of others. Let us with Latin, Economics, Chemistry, Pedagogy, Stenography, — let us STUDY MEN. There is little use to study about the Bible and not search into its pages, read its dramas, its songs, its epics, its exhortation, orations and letters; there is little use to study about man's environment, whether social, economic, intellectual or material, if we do not study the man or woman in the seat next to us. Can you hear the silences speak? Can you read the anxious look? Can you forgive the quick word? Do you know that every other man and girl in school has the same fits of remorse, is stirred to action by the same aesthetic sense of chivalry and God's right? Do you realize that the same ambitions, the same loves, hates, desires, and at times most bitter isolations, occur within every heart in college. Team work demands a knowledge of men. It necessitates a generous and relevant understanding and an exact mode of expression. The best plan of any group will fail if one man is a traitor; the best-charted play in basketball fails if each man does not understand the other. Let us watch and grow wise, and, wise in the wisdom that comes with close association we will be able to do real team work.

Team work is manifested not only in athletics but in every department of college life. Then work spells a healthy cooperation with our professors; it means a will to do the assigned class work, a hesitancy to hold back 20 men and women because of our own mental lassitude. Team work means a helpful smile, a hearty laugh, a firm handshake, and a spirit willing to make amends for the multitudinous mistakes that go with every day's work.

Let every man and girl in college manifest "team work," let us make 1914 known as a year of unified purpose. Victory will be ours in not alone basketball, but in friendship and service and loyalty to the old school; it will be written on the registrar's book and indelibly engraved upon the heart of every student if each morning, to all that is high and holy, we pledge ourselves one and all, to practice "TEAM WORK."

"SKOW", STEWART, JR., '14.

College Students as Cheaters

The University of Chicago has established a "Court of Honor," in charge of the students, to deal with members of the various classes who have been cheating in order to pass their examinations. The establishment of the court is hailed as a splendid thing and may be it is, but it is also a confession that the cheaters in the university have become so numerous that it is necessary to establish a court to deal with them.

Perhaps it may be a good plan to establish a court of this kind. Law justice, however, would suggest that the cheaters be allowed to go their way and reap the harvest of their own folly. The cheaters never cheat anyone but themselves. The student is not benefiting the college much by his presence. He is there to be benefited by the college. If he is so lacking in the principles of common honesty that he turns cheat, little will be gained by detecting him and attempting to punish him. His punishment will come later when he wakes up and finds that in attempting to cheat the college he has cheated only himself.

His Umbersoll

The drizzly rain was falling fast
As up the village street there passed
A youth who bore mid dripping drops
A chunk of cloth and wire and props,
To shield him from the falling slops,
His Umbersoll.

His feet were wet, his socks beneath
Were green and mossy as the heath,
And like a silver fog horn rung
His cuss words as the breezes flung
And almost from his fingers wrung
His Umbersoll.

And as he plodded up the street
The pavement slipped beneath his feet,
For from the West there came a gust
That pushed him backward with a thrust
And fall or lose forever then he must
His Umbersoll.

He struggled manfully to arise,
The rain still tumbling from the skies,
The wind still tried to do it's worst
For it blew harder than at first,
He said wild things, he almost cursed,
His Umbersoll.

All things indeed must end at last,
So slowly up the street he passed,
He went one block, then three or four,
But still he held up as before
The thing that made him mad of yore,
His Umbersoll.

Then something made his head to whirl,
He saw a most attractive girl,
She had no umbersoll to hold
To shield her from the rain so cold,
Ah, now 'twas worth it's weight in gold,
His Umbersoll.

The drizzly rain still fell quite fast,
And up the street the youth still passed,
The wind still blew from out the west,
But now he walked no more alone,
and best
Of all, he cursed no more, but blest
His Umbersoll.

Personals

Guy Hickok has left college again to go into business.
E. F. Starkey came and signed up for music. Starkey kinda likes us.
Lucile Williams of Newport in one of our new-former students this term.
Monte Smithson registered again, coming this time from Crescent, Nevada.

We are glad to welcome back Miss Carrie McKee who joined us on registration day.

Professor Van Osdel was editor of the Telephone-Register during the three weeks vacation of Editor Eckman.

George Stewart and Willard Hayes have been teaching in McMinnville High School while mumps reign supreme in the high school faculty.

Mervin Irish registered again this term and, incidentally, takes his old place on the basketball team. Irish is one of the fastest forwards in the league.

Among the new students we are glad to welcome: Bertha and Ethel Emerson, of Spokane; Leroy Collins, Spokane; Esther Smith, North Yakima; Earnest Reynolds, Centrallia; Mabel Nelson, Portland; Reginald Lucas, Sacramento; and Ralph C. Berry, Peavine.

Exchanges.

The Exchange Department is pleased to acknowledge several excellent new exchanges. In a later issue of The Review clippings and details concerning them will be given more fully.

The following is a specimen of the reformed spelling of "The Reed College Quest":

Altho greatly handicapt by the inadequate facilities offered by the social room, the Corthurnians acquitted themselves well Wednesday evening when they gave the two Lady Gregory plays, "Spreding the News" and "The Traveling Man." The audience showd this both by its harty applause and by compliments which bore the ring of truth.

We would respectfully suggest that greater care in preparing "real" reformed spelling or the absolute discontinuance of the system would give the reader more assurance that some proof-reading had been done.

Clerk: "This book will get half your Latin for you."

Latin Stude: "Then give me two quick!"—Spectrum (Univ. of Redlands, Calif.)

The Review, McMinnville College, McMinnville, Oregon, announces the largest Freshman class in the history of the institution. To properly commemorate this important event one issue of "The Review" has been issued by the Freshman class. Although the printing is done in green ink, the upperclassmen had better look to their laurels, for this bunch of Freshmen are not so "green" as they may seem.—Norm (Oregon Normal School, Monmouth, Oregon.)

Teacher—"What is velocity, Johnny?"

Johnny—"Velocity is what a fellow lets go of a wasp with."—Ottawa Campus (Ottawa Univ., Kansas.)

Teacher—Who wrote the "Complete Angler?"

Pupil—Why, er—Euclid.—St. Helen's Hall Quarterly.

In The Review of McMinnville, Ore.

we see the picture of Geo. J. Kyle, who is at the head of the Biology Department. Prof. Kyle was once an instructor in G. I. C. By the way when it comes to PEP, The Review is all to the good. We have missed your paper lately. Don't forget us.—The Volante (Grand Island College, Nebraska.)

Proverbs—A Joke in the Josh box is worth two in the head.

Put not your trust in bluffs.—Spectrum (Univ. of Redlands.)

The American colonization society is giving the Liberian government $65,000 to establish a school for the children of its citizens modeled after those of Hampton and Tuskegee.—Spelman Messenger, (Spelman Seminary, Atlanta, Georgia.)

The Review—Your stories are written in a remarkably vivid and realistic manner, but your joke department contains far too many advertisements, which is no joke but certainly a serious mistake.—Crescent (Pacific College, Newberg, Oregon.)

In reply we would say that but one advertisement appears on our Local page. It is "no joke" but done with the serious intention of having that advertisement noticed and read. It would seem that this has been admirably accomplished.

"The three great evils of the present are Vacations, Coca Cola and the Saturday Evning Post."

"If you rattle in your place, you aren't big enough."

"When I see a college graduate who can't spell, I think of a man with a plug hat and barefooted."

"Boost! Boost your inferiors because they need it. Boost your superiors because you need it."—Norm (Oregon Normal School.)

A first year German paper is responsible for a sentence like this,—"Er steckte seinen Hut auf den Kopfweh," which is being interpreted, "He put his hat on his headache."—Crescent, (Pacific College.)

Writers and speakers, who happen to be clear thinkers, practice scientific management for the special benefit of the consumer. With them it is not to economize on raw material, for they usually have an inexhaustible supply.

It certainly is not to increase their output, although they are usually paid by the word. It is solely to make it easier and clearer for the reader and listener. Of course, all workers in words have not adopted scientific management. There are yet writers who consider language an end in itself, and spend their time in arranging intricate and astounding combinations. If they undertake to describe a field they proceed to lay around it a rail fence of words, phrases, and metaphors until, by the time they get the stake and riders up, you have forgotten the field and are tired of the fence. There are occasions that will still call out oratorical gentlemen who fondly love their own mellifluous voice as it caroms among unscalable peaks of glittering metaphor and rolls down deep, dim abysses of meaningless emotions; but, on the whole, people are caring less and less for meaningless phrases, however cunningly arranged. They want the substance of thought. They pass by the writer or speaker whose intricate phrases are but a drop curtain to hide what does not go on in his head, but they give more and more attention to the man who really thinks and uses language to transmit his thought.—Colliers.

certainly is too bad for him that there isn't a beauty parlor in "Mac."

There was to have been another party in Music Hall last Friday but because of a high school basketball game it was postponed for a week. I asked a girl to go with me and she said she would. When they decided not to have it one of the fellows went and asked her to go to the game with him before I could. That's just my luck. I went to the game anyway, which was as swift as the Alumni-H. S. game at home during the holidays.

Say Vera, guess who's down here? Do you remember that fellow who sold aluminum one summer at home, who tried to sell some to mother, and when he was about to convince her of its worth, forgot his speech? I certainly was surprised to find him here. His name is Monte Smithson. One wouldn't think to see him now that he had ever been capable of forgetting aluminum speeches.

It is pretty amusing the ways some of the fellows take of becoming popular with the girls. I heard one of the girls saying she that second year "Preps" were pretty presumptuous when they'd ask Freshmen or Sophs to places with them. I took that as sort of a tip, for I had planned to ask a Senior to go to the party with me.

I guess Sam Simpson won't gain any popularity by sitting in the girl's study room for half a period, tho, from remarks I've heard made about it. I'll admit it's a pretty nice place to be, but I haven't a good enough opinion of myself to go there and feel at ease.

Say, Dad, I wonder if you can send me a check? I've been having some pretty tough luck. Some jay got away with my rubbers and forgot to bring them back; I dropped a perfectly new book in Lake de Cozine when it was away up over the grove; I lost my fountain pen, and then, to cap it all, broke my glasses. I heard some one say that Irish, one of the old fellows who has come back, sends a story like this home every once in a while, but this is a perfectly true tale of woe, and I'll be ever so much obliged for a remittance.

Lake de Cozine, which I told you of when I was home, had changed from a little riverlet to a "surging flood" by the time I came back, owing to the rise of the river and its backing up. Some of the fellows dared a bunch to go in swimming and Bob Kyle was among those who took the dare. He has that lovely shade of tan-auburn, yellow-red, hair which Vera admires so much and when he came out he looked about the same as that yellow cur of Jim Walker's used to look when the boys would send him out into the mud flats for sticks at low tide.

There are a few couples down here who are very much devoted to each other and I've been noticing one of them who go along right in broad day light on a perfectly safe side-walk locking arms like a couple of country kids at a fair. Vera and Dot Garden talk about how a fellow ought to help a girl down stairs and across muddy streets and help her along certain streets. That's all right. But excuse me, when it comes to hanging on to a girl all the way across the college bridge in day time. I don't know, tho, maybe he has rheumatism and needs support.

Vera, you remember you girls were wishing you had dimples like that new girl in your class at home? Well, I've just noticed Prof. Frerich's dimples and they've got hers beaten a mile and he has rosy cheeks that would make yours sit up and take notice. He's all-right, too. I feel as if there was sort of a bond between us because he lost his rubbers, too, but he called for his from the chapel platform and they came back.

Prof. Wallace is now acting pastor at the church. He preached two fine sermons the Sunday before school began. Prayer meeting Thursday night was an inspiration. The room was crowded until there was hardly a vacant seat. It would do Dad's heart good to see such a congregation on prayer-meeting nights at our church at home.

I'll tell you a joke I heard about Prof. Wallace when he was going to school here, the next time I write. I've developed a headache tonight so will have to close. Mother, I believe your son Harrison is studying too hard. (Er—hum!) What do you think?

Vera, you tell that youngster in the new family next door that I'll bring him a punching bag when I come home this spring if he will bring bones to Snaggs every day. He looked skinny when I was home and I don't want

"While I was at Cannady's this fellow came in and asked for a hypodermic syringe. Guess he forgot it last night. My suspicion was aroused immediately by the man's looks. You see his face is covered with wrinkles, altho he cannot be more than twenty-five years old. Mr. McFarland, too, will recognize the sunken eyes and that expression peculiar to the cocaine fiend. The cigar he was smoking was an Elearo. Then he raised his hand to knock off the ashes and I saw that the middle finger was missing at the second joint. I can show you the impression of that hand in the dust on the window sill down-stairs.

"When I knew that this was really the man, the rest was easy. I went behind the counter, told the boys about it, and got their gun. He came willingly enough."

"Good work, Jack! Good work!" exclaimed McFarland, and he winked as he saw the sheriff start toward the door with his new prisoner. "By the way, come up to dinner this evening. I want you to meet Dolly."
