Worth 1,000 Words

During Oregon's stay-at-home order, more than 60 staffers still reported to campus to maintain Linfield's buildings and grounds.

Cleaning crews, utility and building trades workers, groundskeepers and mailroom staff made sure our spaces were safe and sound — all while maintaining physical distancing.

“The work we do every day, when no one is looking, is important and vital,” said Allison Horn, director of facilities and auxiliary services. “It has been gratifying to see the efforts of so many of our team members become visible, because so often their work is only noticed when there is a problem or complaint.”
