8-11-2011

Transcript of The 127-Pound Halibut

Robert W. Bush

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.linfield.edu/dory_transcripts_all

Part of the Cultural History Commons, Oral History Commons, Speech and Rhetorical Studies Commons, and the Theatre and Performance Studies Commons

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.linfield.edu/dory_transcripts_all/2

This Transcript is brought to you for free via open access, courtesy of DigitalCommons@Linfield. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@linfield.edu.

Friend of mine was out fishing with me, and then my second son’s, uh father in-law, was along, too. And we had, uh, two poles, leaning out back the—we sport fish—and we had two poles out the back of the boat. This, uh, halibut come up and took both poles. One right after the other, and uh, both baits. And the two of us fought that fish up to the top of the water. And he reached out with a gaff hook and tried to, kill—and uh to the back of the head to kill it, ya know. All it did was make him mad. And he jerked and he broke one of the lines off, and went back to the bottom again, so he fought it up then.

It wound up anyway, it was a 127-pound halibut. [Laughter] It took three of us all we could to do get it into the boat. And then when we got it in the boat we had to, take and put a rope on its tail and through the gills and hog-tie it, uh. Otherwise, it would’ve beat the boat apart, with—with—with their nerves, uh, it would’ve beat the boat apart. But, that was probably the biggest fish we ever put on the boat,\textsuperscript{2} a 127-pound halibut.

NOTES:
\textsuperscript{1}Robert Bush began fishing in 1971.
\textsuperscript{2}Robert Bush’s dory is named \textit{Short Shot}. 