

1-1-2014

Abandoned Church

José Angel Araguz
Linfield College

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.linfield.edu/englfac\_pubs

Part of the Poetry Commons

---

DigitalCommons@Linfield Citation

Araguz, José Angel, "Abandoned Church" (2014). Faculty Publications. Published Version. Submission 26.
https://digitalcommons.linfield.edu/englfac\_pubs/26

This Published Version is brought to you for free via open access, courtesy of DigitalCommons@Linfield. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@linfield.edu.

ABANDONED CHURCH

The men on the steps grow quiet, and together turn their heads
when a woman passes,
her dress rising like a hand
pointing the way.

—from Rattle #44, Summer 2014

---

Jose Angel Araguz: “These poems come from working at times in a five-line form, which I call ‘hands,’ maybe because each could be written on the palm of a hand. I consider them the poetic, unkempt nephews to Yasunari Kawabata’s ‘palm of the hand’ stories. These pieces are surprising me, pushing me to be concise and spooky, narrative and imagistic within a limited frame.”