Finding Common Interests in the Times of Rising Conflict: Shibusawa Eiichi and the 1909 Japanese Commercial Commission to the United States

Sydney Owen

Research Methodology
This project is a historical analysis of the 1909 Japanese Commercial Commission to the United States, using articles from US newspaper archives covering the commission’s visit.

The 1909 Japanese Commercial Commission was an unofficial diplomatic mission, headed by Eiichi Shibusawa and a group of the leading figures of Japan, including businessmen, financiers, heads of chambers of commerce, educators, and newspapermen. They came at the invitation of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce and the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the Pacific Coast and hoped to improve relations between the United States and Japan, through private, economic diplomacy. The purpose of the Commission was to develop friendship between the two nations and encourage trade and commerce, a sentiment repeatedly expressed by Shibusawa and other commission members, as well as their American hosts. This project in part examined the international relations between Japan and the United States, specifically in context of Japan’s recent victory in the Russo-Japanese War.

The Commission’s timing coincided with heightened tensions between the two nations as a result of these events. From the Japanese perspective, it served as an opportunity to espouse the benefits of closer commercial ties, as well as to ease fears concerning immigration and war. For American businessmen, it was the chance to increase trade and take advantage of Japan’s rapidly increasing and modernizing economy. For US leaders, it was an opportunity to strengthen diplomatic ties with a nation that now demanded to be taken seriously and treated fairly.

With Japan’s victory over Russia in the Russo-Japanese War in 1905, Japan became a recognized world power, in effect challenging long held perceptions of weakness and backwardness held by the United States and the West. The timing of the Commission’s visit coincides with rising anti-Japanese, anti-immigration sentiment in the United States in response to what was perceived to be a new, growing, and immediate threat from Japan. The goal of Eiichi Shibusawa and the Japanese Commercial Commission of 1909 was to ease these tensions between the United States and Japan through private diplomacy and commercial ties.

The Commission spent in Los Angeles and San Francisco call, September 20, 1909, Page 1

Bibliography

“Interview With Japanese Baron and Baroness.” The Hawaiian star. December 11, 1909, second edition, 2nd Section, Page 11

“Japanese Are Needed at Home, Says Commissions.” The San Francisco Call, September 21, 1909, Page 9

“Japanese Are Needed at Home, Says Commissions; Baron Shibusawa Shows Necessity of Orientals Staying in Countries Nipponese.” Los Angeles herald, November 21, 1909, Image 1

“Japanese Are Banqueted by Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.” Los Angeles Herald, September 19, 1909, Page 1

“Japanese Are Banqueted by Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.” The San Francisco Call, September 21, 1909, Page 9

“Japanese Are Banqueted at Minneapolis; Ministers-Presidents of the Little Brown Men.” The San Francisco Call, September 20, 1909, Page 1

“Japanese Commercial Commission Meet President at Banquet in Minneapolis.” The San Francisco Chronicle, September 20, 1909, Page 1

“Japanese Day at the Seattle Show, Record Attendance Given Glimpse of Their Home Life.” The San Francisco Call, September 18, 1909, Image 13

“Japanese Impressed. Steamer Line Between Our Port and Japan May Result from Visit of Commissioners.” Los Angeles Times, November 03, 1909, Image 1

“Japanese Pleased With Taft’s Words: Comment at Length on the Meeting of Visitors With Executive.” San Francisco Chronicle, November 04, 1909, Image 1

“Japanese Pleased With Taft’s Words: Comment at Length on the Meeting of Visitors With Executive.” The Salt Lake tribune. September 05, 1909, Image 1

“Japanese Speaks In Brotherly Terms to Commissioners.” Daily Arizona silver belt. November 04, 1909, Image 1

“Japanese Speaks In Brotherly Terms to Commissioners.” Daily Arizona silver belt. November 04, 1909, Image 1

“Japanese War Context and Significance of Commission
Japan’s victory in the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-1905 shocked the world. It was the first modern victory of a Asian nation over a western power, and it signified Japan’s emergence as a world power. The United States reacted with alarm, with some newspapers claiming that war with Japan was imminent, and US Presidents Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft showing a marked change in attitudes toward Japan. It also led to increased controversy over labor and immigration, especially in California.

The newspaper coverage of the time the Commission spent in Los Angeles and San Francisco proved to be some of the most prolific and divided of the Commission’s trip. California was the focal point of American anger over Japanese immigration and labor, but it was also in California that the Commission found some of its most welcoming hosts, possibly because of the great potential for increased trade that California businessmen stood to gain from.