Nursing alumna nurtures children, families facing cancer

Allen was instrumental in securing a federal grant for nurses, the Great Awareness for Idaho Nurses (GAIN) grant. As lead author of the proposal, she was responsible for course development and implementation at every nursing school in Idaho. She remains a consultant on the program.

“I really like to finish what I start,” said Allen, who emerged from Linfield with a strong sense of professional responsibility.

She is past president and a board member of the Idaho Nurses Association, where she advocates for nursing issues and lobbied on Capitol Hill on behalf of safe nursing practices. She is also a strong proponent of Camp Rainbow Gold, an American Cancer Society camp.

Allen said her Linfield experience prepared her in all aspects of professional interpreter is available,” she said. “It’s learning from a cultural professional.”

“I feel very fortunate,” Allen said. “I am truly grateful for my Linfield education.”

Ruling with respect

Just when Judge Sandra Thompson ‘68 thinks she’s heard it all, a defendant insists she had to steal a scarf to wear to church. The judge is unmoved.

Thompson knows what it’s like to lose money to buy what you want — or to pay your court fine. “I give people a year to pay their fine, and I’ll make special arrangements if they don’t have the money, including community service. But I expect them to fulfill their obligations,” she said.

In the 1960s Thompson chose Linfield from colleges the National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students matched her with, based on her SAT scores and personal information. But after three years, the financial aid ended and she couldn’t afford to stay.

Thompson withdrew from Linfield and went home to San Tracy, Calif.

been some blessing to help me get over it,” she says.

Her Linfield days were not over; she now serves on the college’s Board of Trustees and chairs the committee on student affairs.

Thompson, who earned her law degree from the University of Michigan in 1972, was appointed to the South Bay, Calif. Municipal Court in 1984 by then-Gov. George Deukmejian and was elevated to Los Angeles Superior Court when the courts were unified in 2000.

She also served as president of the National Association of Women Judges in 2005.

Thompson, who hears misdemeanor criminal cases, didn’t always want to be a judge. “I wanted to be an actress or a singer, but I felt I was not good enough to make people stop eating their ice cream,” she said. As a Linfield student, she appeared in the play No Strings.

She describes herself as “an inveterate theater-goer.” One of her favorite plays, which she saw again recently, is Twelve Angry Men, about a jury.

The seeds of her judicial career were planted in high school. She presided over student court hearings on infractions such as smoking and wearing open-toed shoes without nylons. The adviser encouraged her to consider becoming a judge. Thompson had no idea at the time that she would have to become a lawyer first.

She worked as an Ingleside city attorney and a Los Angeles County deputy district attorney before her judicial appointment.

Prosecutor Joan Jenkins says it’s a pleasure to try a case before Thompson. “She’s always prepared. She’s fair to both sides and goes out of her way to make the jury feel respected and important. She’s so respectful of everyone. . . And she knows the law like a son-of-a-guns.”
