2005

Picture Perfect, Perfect Pictures

Linfield Magazine Staff

Tony Overman '85

Ryan Gardner '97

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.linfield.edu/linfield_magazine

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://digitalcommons.linfield.edu/linfield_magazine/vol2/iss1/8

This article is brought to you for free via open access, courtesy of DigitalCommons@Linfield. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@linfield.edu.
Picture perfect, perfect pictures

Photojournalists Tony Overman ’85 (left) and Ryan Gardner ’97 share a sampling of their award-winning photography from The Olympian in Olympia, Wash., and the Corvallis Gazette-Times, respectively. The two photojournalists shared their expertise during a January Term photojournalism class at Linfield College. Overman, who has been at The Olympian since 1997, was named Regional Photographer of the Year by the National Press Photographers Association for the second time. He’s won first place for photography in the Best of Gannett twice and second place three times and has received regional awards from the Society of Professional Journalists. Gardner has also won several awards from the National Press Photographers Association, Sports Shooter, the Suburban Newspapers of America, the Society of Professional Journalists and the Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association.

Tony Overman ’85 said the best photography lesson he has learned is to focus on “faces, faces, faces.” “I love the fact that every day I get to take photos of people. I love to capture the natural moment.”

Left: Maria Ferguson, 7, melts the end of a candle to place in front of an icon just before the inaugural Sunday service of a Corvallis Russian Orthodox Church. The candle symbolizes her prayer ascending heavenward and the warmth of her love for God and His toward mankind.

Right: Oregon State’s Steven Jackson makes an acrobatic dive into the end zone during a game against the University of Washington in 2002.

Below: No. 1 USC’s Dominique Byrd brings down a one-handed touchdown catch while Oregon State’s Brandon Browner tries to prevent the reception in a fog-enshrouded Reser Stadium.

A passerby reacts with surprise to an eight-foot-tall Bigfoot walking in downtown Olympia. Don Strom of Astoria brought the homemade costume along on a visit for his niece’s birthday and decided to take it out for a walk. “Most people never get to see a Bigfoot,” said Strom, who works weekends “drumming up business” for a restaurant in Seaside, Ore.

Tony Overman ’85 said the best photography lesson he has learned is to focus on “faces, faces, faces.” “I love the fact that every day I get to take photos of people. I love to capture the natural moment.”

Left: Maria Ferguson, 7, melts the end of a candle to place in front of an icon just before the inaugural Sunday service of a Corvallis Russian Orthodox Church. The candle symbolizes her prayer ascending heavenward and the warmth of her love for God and His toward mankind.

Right: Oregon State’s Steven Jackson makes an acrobatic dive into the end zone during a game against the University of Washington in 2002.

Below: No. 1 USC’s Dominique Byrd brings down a one-handed touchdown catch while Oregon State’s Brandon Browner tries to prevent the reception in a fog-enshrouded Reser Stadium.

A young girl relaxes in the breeze and setting sun as she holds her face at the window of her family’s car driving along Highway 8 west of Olympia.

Right: Protestors scurry to escape a fog of pepper spray as Seattle police officers clear Union Street in downtown Seattle during the opening day of the World Trade Organization meeting, which drew 50,000 protesters attempting to shut down the meetings.

Below: Oregon State University gymnast Lindsay Nelson tied a personal best 9.925 on the vault and got a personal best and first place in all-around with 39.575. This is probably my favorite photo ever taken.

A passerby reacts with surprise to an eight-foot-tall Bigfoot walking in downtown Olympia. Don Strom of Astoria brought the homemade costume along on a visit for his niece’s birthday and decided to take it out for a walk. “Most people never get to see a Bigfoot,” said Strom, who works weekends “drumming up business” for a restaurant in Seaside, Ore.

Tony Overman ’85 said the best photography lesson he has learned is to focus on “faces, faces, faces.” “I love the fact that every day I get to take photos of people. I love to capture the natural moment.”

Left: Maria Ferguson, 7, melts the end of a candle to place in front of an icon just before the inaugural Sunday service of a Corvallis Russian Orthodox Church. The candle symbolizes her prayer ascending heavenward and the warmth of her love for God and His toward mankind.

Right: Oregon State’s Steven Jackson makes an acrobatic dive into the end zone during a game against the University of Washington in 2002.

Below: No. 1 USC’s Dominique Byrd brings down a one-handed touchdown catch while Oregon State’s Brandon Browner tries to prevent the reception in a fog-enshrouded Reser Stadium.

A young girl relaxes in the breeze and setting sun as she holds her face at the window of her family’s car driving along Highway 8 west of Olympia.

Right: Protestors scurry to escape a fog of pepper spray as Seattle police officers clear Union Street in downtown Seattle during the opening day of the World Trade Organization meeting, which drew 50,000 protesters attempting to shut down the meetings.

Below: Oregon State University gymnast Lindsay Nelson tied a personal best 9.925 on the vault and got a personal best and first place in all-around with 39.575. This is probably my favorite photo ever taken.

Helicopter pilot Jess Hagerman swoops low as Rocky Spencer of the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife hangs from the doorway and fires a tranquilizer dart (right) into a Roosevelt elk during a capture procedure south of Elma. The elk were to be relocated to an area north of Mount Rainier, where native herds are diminishing.

Tony Overman ’85 said the best photography lesson he has learned is to focus on “faces, faces, faces.” “I love the fact that every day I get to take photos of people. I love to capture the natural moment.”

Left: Maria Ferguson, 7, melts the end of a candle to place in front of an icon just before the inaugural Sunday service of a Corvallis Russian Orthodox Church. The candle symbolizes her prayer ascending heavenward and the warmth of her love for God and His toward mankind.

Right: Oregon State’s Steven Jackson makes an acrobatic dive into the end zone during a game against the University of Washington in 2002.

Below: No. 1 USC’s Dominique Byrd brings down a one-handed touchdown catch while Oregon State’s Brandon Browner tries to prevent the reception in a fog-enshrouded Reser Stadium.

A young girl relaxes in the breeze and setting sun as she holds her face at the window of her family’s car driving along Highway 8 west of Olympia.

Right: Protestors scurry to escape a fog of pepper spray as Seattle police officers clear Union Street in downtown Seattle during the opening day of the World Trade Organization meeting, which drew 50,000 protesters attempting to shut down the meetings.

Below: Oregon State University gymnast Lindsay Nelson tied a personal best 9.925 on the vault and got a personal best and first place in all-around with 39.575. This is probably my favorite photo ever taken.

Helicopter pilot Jess Hagerman swoops low as Rocky Spencer of the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife hangs from the doorway and fires a tranquilizer dart (right) into a Roosevelt elk during a capture procedure south of Elma. The elk were to be relocated to an area north of Mount Rainier, where native herds are diminishing.

Tony Overman ’85 said the best photography lesson he has learned is to focus on “faces, faces, faces.” “I love the fact that every day I get to take photos of people. I love to capture the natural moment.”

Left: Maria Ferguson, 7, melts the end of a candle to place in front of an icon just before the inaugural Sunday service of a Corvallis Russian Orthodox Church. The candle symbolizes her prayer ascending heavenward and the warmth of her love for God and His toward mankind.

Right: Oregon State’s Steven Jackson makes an acrobatic dive into the end zone during a game against the University of Washington in 2002.

Below: No. 1 USC’s Dominique Byrd brings down a one-handed touchdown catch while Oregon State’s Brandon Browner tries to prevent the reception in a fog-enshrouded Reser Stadium.

A young girl relaxes in the breeze and setting sun as she holds her face at the window of her family’s car driving along Highway 8 west of Olympia.

Right: Protestors scurry to escape a fog of pepper spray as Seattle police officers clear Union Street in downtown Seattle during the opening day of the World Trade Organization meeting, which drew 50,000 protesters attempting to shut down the meetings.

Below: Oregon State University gymnast Lindsay Nelson tied a personal best 9.925 on the vault and got a personal best and first place in all-around with 39.575. This is probably my favorite photo ever taken.

Helicopter pilot Jess Hagerman swoops low as Rocky Spencer of the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife hangs from the doorway and fires a tranquilizer dart (right) into a Roosevelt elk during a capture procedure south of Elma. The elk were to be relocated to an area north of Mount Rainier, where native herds are diminishing.

Tony Overman ’85 said the best photography lesson he has learned is to focus on “faces, faces, faces.” “I love the fact that every day I get to take photos of people. I love to capture the natural moment.”

Left: Maria Ferguson, 7, melts the end of a candle to place in front of an icon just before the inaugural Sunday service of a Corvallis Russian Orthodox Church. The candle symbolizes her prayer ascending heavenward and the warmth of her love for God and His toward mankind.

Right: Oregon State’s Steven Jackson makes an acrobatic dive into the end zone during a game against the University of Washington in 2002.

Below: No. 1 USC’s Dominique Byrd brings down a one-handed touchdown catch while Oregon State’s Brandon Browner tries to prevent the reception in a fog-enshrouded Reser Stadium.
Picture perfect, perfect pictures

Photojournalists Tony Overman '85 (left) and Ryan Gardner '97 share a sampling of their award-winning photography from The Olympian in Olympia, Wash., and the Corvallis Gazette-Times, respectively. The two photojournalists share their expertise during a January Term photojournalism class at Linfield College. Overman, who has been at The Olympian since 1997, was named Regional Photographer of the Year by the National Press Photographers Association for the second time. He’s won first place for photography in the Best of Gannett twice and second place three times and has received regional awards from the Society of Professional Journalists. Gardner has also won several awards from the National Press Photographers Association, Sports Shooter, the Suburban Newspapers of America, the Society of Professional Journalists and the Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association.

Tony Overman ’85 said the best photography lesson he has learned is to focus on “faces, faces, faces.” “I love the fact that every day I get to take photos of people. I love to capture the natural moment.”

Photo by Denny Brooks/OnTheRun.com

A young girl relaxes in the breeze and setting sun as she holds her face at the window of her family’s car driving along Highway 8 west of Olympia.

Photo by Ryan Gardner/Corvallis Gazette-Times

Protesters scurry to escape a fog of pepper spray as Seattle police officers clear Union Street in downtown Seattle during the opening day of the World Trade Organization meeting, which drew 50,000 protesters attempting to shut down the meetings.

Photo by Sol Neelman